REHABILITATION OF THE BURNED SHOULDER

EVALUATION AND INTERVENTIONS

Course 2026

About the Course

The shoulder is a complex and highly mobile joint, and its proper function is crucial for executing a diverse array of daily activities. Unfortunately, following a burn, scar contracture, and the cumulative effects of immobilization, compensatory movements, or pain-induced postures can displace the shoulder joint from its normal alignment, leading to a more permanent deformity and further restricting shoulder mobility.

Understanding how to evaluate a burned shoulder to accurately identify issues and their underlying causes, as well as to select targeted interventions for optimal outcomes, is essential when managing burns on the shoulders and upper extremities.

This course is intended for:

- Physiotherapists and occupational therapists.
- Other professionals directly engaged in burn rehabilitation, whether with hospitalized or outpatient pediatric or adult patients.

REHABILITATION OF THE BURNED SHOULDER

EVALUATION AND INTERVENTIONS

Course 2026

Objectives

Following this training, you will be able to:

- Understand the techniques for assessing the shoulder to detect an atypical scapulohumeral rhythm.
- Understand the primary intervention strategies for managing post-burn shoulder complications, encompassing posture correction, positioning, muscle strengthening, pressure therapy, and activities of daily living (ADL) training, among others.

Course content

- Clinical presentation of atypical scapulohumeral rhythm following burn injury and assessment techniques.
- Rehabilitation strategies for addressing post-burn abnormal scapulohumeral rhythm.
- Evaluation of pressure therapy interventions for the burned shoulder.
- ADL functional training and the utilization of assistive devices following burn injuries.

Evaluation

The subsequent evaluations will be conducted:

- Pre-test to evaluate the participants' foundational knowledge level.
- A brief quiz following each lesson to reinforce the key concepts presented.
- Post-test to evaluate the enhancement of participants' knowledge.
